Highlighting ISU Resources

Did you know Iowa State University has an Ombuds Office?

This is a confidential, independent, neutral resource you can use to informally work through challenges you might be facing in the workplace - with colleagues, supervisors or policies and procedures. The office can serve as a sounding board, discuss possible options, provide policy assistance, give communication coaching, and much more. Review the Ombuds Office website for full details on this ISU resource.

To make an appointment with the university's Ombuds Officer, Deanna Clingan-Fischer, call 294-0268 or email ombuds@iastate.edu. The Ombuds Office is located in Room 37 of Physics Hall.

Find links to other helpful ISU Resources on the P&S Council ISU Resource Guide (PDF is clickable).

August Seminar Series event - Know Yourself Better: How Do I Respond to Expectations?

In this session, Abby Stanek, ISU Extension and Outreach, uses Gretchen Rubin's research on the Four Tendencies to help participants learn more about themselves and how to utilize Rubin's framework to make better decisions, meet deadlines, suffer less stress, and engage more effectively with other people.

To view this Council Seminar Series event, log in to Learn@ISU, type "FY19-2" into the search bar, and click launch! The recording can also be found by clicking on the course catalog tab and scrolling down to the Professional and Scientific Council catalog.

Please make sure to allow pop-ups, cookies, and flash content from training.ehs.iastate.edu in order to view the video. After viewing the video, you will need to complete the user sign-off screen (pop-up) to have it added to your Learn@ISU training profile.
